Make your garden your very own decorating on a budget. For those of you who are interested in building, it will be easy to make your own urns. (These are worth keeping for a long time, and when you want to redecorate, you will be able to skip the expense of buying a new one.) From the outside, they look like large flower pots, but inside they're large enough for small tree branches and are able to grow plants. There are many different sizes and styles, so you can't go wrong with these urns. You don't have to go over $100 to get these urns, and if you have a planter container you want to change out for another, you could probably get these for less than $100. I think the best part of these urns is that you can make them yourself, and you don't have to worry about buying them if you don't like them. If you're interested in learning how to make your own planter urns, here's a good tutorial from my friend Cari. She used some of the same ideas to make her planter urns. She has a link to her original article so you can check it out. If you want to watch the video instead, you can click on the link above. While you're at it, here are some other great craft projects that you might like to try: This is definitely one of my favorite ideas for a quick and easy DIY that won't break the bank. If you're looking for something new to do with your leftover yarn, there are many different craft ideas with yarn. The nice thing about this project is that it's easy to make and can be done by a child or a beginner crafter. If you're interested in this craft, you can find some tips on how to make this shoe tree here. You can click here to learn how to make a crochet lace hat. If you've ever wondered how to crochet an infinity scarf, here are some very basic tips on how to make one: How To Crochet An Infinity Scarf Materials Needed: (1) length of yarn or string, to be used as the main body of the scarf (1) length of yarn or string, to be used for the border (1) needle 1.
