A: Here's what it's about: I am sanskrit from an old Indian country. It is a holy language which is used in religious activities. It is said that because of the meaning of the holy language, it is not permitted to utter it. We will be encountering a modern class room where the most prominent student, Dr. Priyamana Swami will have the last laugh on the students because he is going to pronounce the holy sanskrit language. He and other students will be playing a game of cricket during the class. Will we enjoy the game or will we be in trouble? I suggest you go to and from the comments about 20 minutes in, you can find this link to some text: This event is being organized by a group called Calcutta Cricket Club. Priyamana Swami is a professor of Sanskrit from the University of California, and he's been invited to give a guest lecture in a school. A short film about Sanskrit culture and its role in Indian society is going to be shown. The lecture will take place in a school auditorium, and is being sponsored by the Sanskrit department of the same university. Priyamana Swami is going to read out a verse from Sanskrit grammar and his pronunciation will be the focus of the audience's attention. There is a cricket match going on, which is interrupted by this event. The whole place turns into a huge stadium, with an audience of several thousands of people, all cheering for Priyamana Swami.
